

Hi People!

For years, rents have exploded here in the neighborhood. Low-income people, alternative projects and small businesses are being supplanted. Companies such as AirBnB, for which apartments are made from living space, contribute to this development.

The Markthalle 9 is part of this development. The operators want to turn the market hall into a place where there are only offers for people with a lot of money and tourists. Now the Aldi, the last offer for the basic food supply and for low-income people, is to disappear from the hall.

We as neighbors are angry. We want a real market hall and a market hall that is affordable for everyone. We do not want a market hall where many people here in the district are marginalized and only people with a lot of money can afford oysters, lobsters, Japanese delicacies and expensive street food.

We look forward to supporting our fight for an affordable life here in the district and a Market Hall for all. Write an E-Mail to the market hall operators or write something about our protest on the Facebook page of Markthalle 9, on Trip Advisor or on Google Ratings! Join us on the road against gentrification and high rents! Do not use AirBnB!
